MEET OUR LEADERSHIP

PRESIDENT NEWS: "I'LL HAVE IFRS AND A WRENCH, PLEASE"

Today as I assessed the impact of IFRS 15 on a key software contract, triaged a forecast issue within one of our business lines, prepared a slide deck on segment reporting, and listened to my boss give an update about our company's strategic direction, it struck me how varied and interesting a career in finance can be. It also made me think about FEI New York City, and how critical continuous learning is for financial executives. We are called on to contribute to our businesses in so many different ways that without a broad toolkit we just can't be effective in our roles. Growing and maintaining that toolkit is key, and FEI New York City is a great place to make that happen.

If you haven't engaged with us in a while, make it a point to come to one of our upcoming programs. The calendar is here. In addition to growing your skills you will also network directly with some of the profession's finest, including the 14 CFOs and CAOs that have joined the chapter in just the last few weeks. And if you want to grow your team's skills, we have a great offer this month: bring up to 10 of your staff to one of our October programs at no additional charge. That's a compelling amount of value and only one of many benefits you will experience as a member of FEI New York City.

Membership matters!

We're holding a seat for you,
Matt

Questions future-focused CFOs must ask about the cloud

Organization leaders make daily determinations about deploying resources — people, capital and assets. As organizations advance through the era of big data, shifting to digital in every possible area, many decisions involve IT investments...
